Town hall meeting

'Town square' tops topic list at village gathering

By PAUL WOLF

MANY RESIDENTS and city officials were cool to the idea of closing 5th Avenue to traffic in order to create a "town square" in front of the Carmel Post office.

However, they appeared to support the idea of some kind of plaza on 5th, which would serve as a commons and social center for the village.

Informally measuring public sentiment for such ideas was one of the goals of Neal Kruse, an architect by trade and the chairman of the 15-member 2016 Committee.

Kruse gave a presentation at Mayor Ken White's second "Town Hall" meeting, which was held Jan. 11 at Carpenter Hall at the Sunset Cultural Center. His committee, charged with forming a vision of how Carmel ought to look on the year of its centennial, has put forward a design for 5th Avenue and called it the "preferred option."

One thing is sure: The post office is already an unofficial center of village life. Without mail delivery, residents must make their daily excursion. Signature-hunters wielding petitions plant themselves there. And townspeople run into each other regularly, ready for conversation and gossip.

"The post office is a very fascinating phenomenon," Kruse said. "It's where we catch up with each other's lives."

...And the problems

Yet some problems now exist. For starters, the parking lot is located across the street on the other side of 5th at Dolores Street. It is dangerous to cross 5th. And the existing sidewalk in front of the post office is too narrow. In all, it is hardly set up like a commons.

How about closing the lower part of 5th? How about tables and chairs in a park-like setting? A gazebo and some more trees?

Parking, according to the preferred option, would remain on the upper two-thirds of 5th between Dolores and San

With petition in, referendum pending on downtown zoning

By PAUL WOLF

THE CITY of Carmel is poised to hold its first bona fide referendum in 25 years.

The residents who seek to repeal the recently enacted downtown zoning changes have gathered the signatures needed to prompt a vote of the people.

"The rezoning of the commercial district would allow the further proliferation of tourist shops and displaced businesses that serve residents," declared Al Eisner shortly after submitting 550 signatures to the city clerk, at city hall on Thursday, Jan. 7.

Meanwhile, while no one denounces the democratic process that has guided the cause, some are expressing disappointment with the cause itself.

"Most of the elements in this ordinance have had no criticism by anyone, and it's very sad to see the entire thing being recalled," said Mayor Ken White in a phone interview. "This ordinance is the result of two-and-a-half years of compromise."

Eisner has been the driving force behind the petition. His comments came in the form of a written statement distributed exclusively to The Carmel Pine. "This (ordinance) is directly contrary to the wishes of the people who live in Carmel," he wrote.

Deficit hawk Panetta

Bearer of bad news before U.S. Senate subcommittee

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE THE nation watched, he didn't hesitate to say what no one wanted to hear. So far, he seems respected for it.

Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Monterey, endured the senate hot seat with his characteristic cool. And, as he sets his sights on a cabinet post, he is already playing a role in Clinton administration: that of the bearer of bad news.

"I sat through the whole thing and he was brutally honest," said a Pine Cone source in Washington, who watches the national political scene for a living.

"He did quite well," the source said Tuesday, reflecting on Monday, when Panetta appeared before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee considering his nomination as director of the Office of Management and Budget. "I gather that he is making an impression on the senators.

Priorities and promises

When it comes to the economy, the president-elect has a jumbled assortment of priorities and promises — short-term "stimulus," long-term investments, tax cuts to the middle class and deficit reduction.

Panetta's message, like a slap in the face, seeks to reverse the order.

"It's just following a historical pattern," said David Yamada, who teaches political science at Monterey Peninsula College. "It will always be the appointee, not the president, who brings bad news."

Yamada and the Washington source believe it must come as no surprise to Bill Clinton that Panetta, chairman of the House Budget Committee and a long-time deficit hawk, would emphasize what he did.

As it turns out, on Tuesday Sen. Lloyd Bensten, the nominee for the Treasury post, gave a similar message.

So it is here, on the deficit, where Panetta could wind up exerting a major influence on crucial policy. Where Clinton may be torn, his top budget man in the Executive Office of the President, could help him make up his mind long before the details of any spending package are assembled.

While bad-news prophets can be of service to a president, they can also alienate themselves. They can be squeezed out, as was David Stockman under Ronald Reagan. "Yes, that could happen for Panetta," said Yamada, not, however, believing it is too likely.

But the MPC instructor said differences between Clinton and Panetta may be more a matter of degree than policy. It may be typical that politicians are prone to promising more, while the staff people show more hard-nosed realism.

But even as congressman, Panetta has spoken against the perennially proposed balanced-budget initiative because it would be so hard to put into effect. To ensure no federal red ink could mean almost certain cuts to such entitlements as social security.

As for Panetta's Monday hearing, the Washington source notes, "It's not often the OMB (director) says, 'It's going to be nothing but pain, pain, pain.' But he has been the harbinger of bad news for a lot of years."

Latest work: The Content of Our Character

Editor's note: This week we are pleased to bring our readers another in a series of sketches celebrating our resident writers and artists. Editorial

A responsible newspaper

Editor's note: We first ran this editorial back on Aug. 27 of last year, but occasionally an editorial bears repeating, particularly if it is informative, constructive and timely. The following editorial, we feel, meets that criteria.

— Ray A. March, editor-in-chief

FOR MONTHS now we've kept an editorial from The Journal of the San Juan Islands on the corner of our desk, waiting for the right time to put it to use. The newsprint is a bit yellowed now and the center crease has obliterated some of the words, but the meaning remains clear.

The San Juan Islands, like Carmel, is a tourist destination. There are residents for and residents against that fact. Against that background, and under some fire from a segment of the newspaper's readership, the editor was asked by the San Juan Lions Club to discuss his responsibilities to his readers.

We thought his comments to the Lions, which were then reprinted as an editorial, were of universal interest and we quote the following excerpt.

"We must remain financially solvent so our readers have a newspaper to read and our advertisers have a medium for their messages.

"We must report the news of the community.

"We must be accurate, fair and consistent as possible.

"We must do all we can to make people think — not agree with us, but think.

"We must keep our pages open to all views and opinions, regardless of what they are.

"We must use the beam of our search light to reveal things others would conceal.

"We must reflect the community as it is, not as we and others wish it to be."

Like The Journal of the San Juan Islands, The Carmel Pine Cone is responsible to the residents of our community, to the business community and to the tourists, and like The Journal, we know we can't satisfy everyone, but we don't know any other way to do it.

Letters to the Editor

Letters to the editor are welcome. Views on all matters are acceptable, following the guidelines of good taste. Letters must not exceed 250 words in length. Letters are subject to editing for style and length. Each letter must contain name, address, telephone number and signature, and preferably be typed and double spaced. Anonymous letters, or those with no phone numbers will not be accepted.

Re-zoning petition

Dear Editor:

It will come as no surprise to me if Al Eisner is able to gather the necessary signatures to put the re-zoning of the commercial district on the ballot. In Carmel it is not hard to find 500 to 600 people who are against everything.

I am reminded of a survey taken a few months back where the question was asked, "Should muffins be sold in a cookie shop?" 500 people answered "No". I was telling a friend of mine that I was astounded by the result of the survey when he reminded me that if the question had been, "Should cookies be sold in a cookie shop", the result would have been the same.

Mr. Eisner will get 400 people to sign his petition and we will have a special election. However, I am almost certain he will be defeated at the polls. The reason is simple. The vast majority of people in this town are tired of government and individuals regulating their lives. With each regulation, personal freedoms and personal property rights are taken from the citizens of Carmel. We only have to look at the farce regarding the tree and the house to see how far some individuals will go to restrict our rights while having no regards for our safety.

It seems to me, that when you start restricting peoples rights and property you better be damn certain that what you are doing will benefit the greater good. And if you err, you better err in favor of the individual!

The quality of life in Carmel will not change one iota if those 17 commercial properties are changed to CC from SC. They were classified CC for decades before they were down zoned in 1984.

The people of Carmel are generally not fooled by the rhetoric that comes from the mouths of those who want to save us, at the expense of our rights, or those who are constantly predicting our demise. That is why the FAR ordinance was defeated at the ballot, and why this new petition will also be defeated. People value their rights more than they fear muffins being sold in a cookie shop.

More on re-zoning

Dear Editor:

For almost two years while the Carmel Planning Commission discussed rezoning the commercial district, numerous Carmel citizens appeared before the commission urging it to convene a General Plan Revision Committee. (At one point the commission even proposed changes so sweeping they would have substantially expanded the central commercial district, would have wiped out the SC and RC zones which had been created earlier to encourage businesses that serve local residents.) Following what some of us view as cursory hearings the commission sent up its findings and presented the city council with various options to "loosen the reins" on the commercial district.

I recall this historical fragment to demonstrate that Carmelites did not sit by idly during the proceedings.

Next, the council — under pressure from landlords, developers, and speculators, and despite citizens' re-expressed concerns — voted to rearrange part of the commercial district. The effect of the council's act must be to encourage more tourist shops and to accelerate the loss of businesses that serve Carmelites primarily. Now that a citizen group has presented the city a referendum petition, the council may choose to reconsider its hasty action. It can repeal the ordinance that rearranged the commercial district, and can call for the creation of a General Plan Revision Committee. Such a panel should study the impacts that rezoning would have — on traffic, on parking, on our economy. By repealing its ordinance, the council would also save us the expense of the special election which looms.

Pacific Meadows

Dear Editor:

As a resident of Pacific Meadows Retirement Community and vice president of our Residents' Council, I currently represent the wishes of approximately 250 people who live here.

We are now at 100 percent of residential occupancy, and we are living with an acute traffic problem at the point where our road going up the hill intersects with Carmel Valley Road (Address: 5315 Carmel Valley Road).

With the marked increase in traffic in and out of our community, the chances of car and truck accidents (with fatalities) has greatly increased.

A few relatively minor highway improvements plus some overdue median strip shrubbery pruning and weed abatement have greatly alleviated the problem.

If the rains had not postponed public works, it would have been done in 24 hours.

TOM OLIVER

Oliver's arraignment

Businesslike mood belies case's gravity

By PAUL WOLF

SAN JOSE — It was a quiet drama whose every move followed a predetermined script.

On a gray, drizzly morning, Thursday, Jan. 7, Tom Oliver and five others entered a five-story federal building in San Jose and pleaded not guilty to conspiracy and business fraud.

They appeared, lodged pleas, agreed to the pretrial conditions, and completed the assorted paperwork that followed the federal grand jury indictment made public last month.

Oliver, president of the Pebble Beach Co., offered his anticipated plea to charges connecting him with the takeover of the Bank of Los Gatos in 1984. The bank failed in 1987.

The indictment accuses Oliver of "making false entries on bank records with the intent to deceive" federal regulators.

It was a day for few surprises. During the proceedings, a modest suspense surrounded the issue of travel restrictions for the defendants. U.S. magistrate Patricia Trumbull ordered Oliver to limit his travel to within California, except for emergency itineraries approved in advance.

"That's standard procedure," said Joseph Russoniello, Oliver's attorney, of the travel restrictions. "We can live with this. These conditions are totally routine."

Russoniello reiterated what Oliver himself has said in a statement: that the charges have nothing to do with his operation of the Pebble Beach Co., and that Oliver has no intention of stepping down.

Trumbull matter-of-factly ordered each defendant to promise to pay $50,000 for failing to show up at subsequent hearings.

Despite some six attorneys on hand, there was a minimum of strife between the partisans of the defense and those of the U.S. government.

In all, the arraignment proceedings rolled through in a mere half hour, moving in businesslike fashion. Oliver, accompanied by his wife, Margaret, wore a gray suit and red tie, and betrayed little emotion.

Besides Oliver, 55, of Pebble Beach, the other defendants were Robert Bonner, 66, also of Pebble Beach; Robert Hopkins Jr., 61, Dallas; ; William Lane, 69, Coral Gables, Florida; Woodard Kingman, 67, San Francisco; and Blynn Shideler, 57, Arizona.

The workaday mood belied the gravity of the charges and possible punishments: the false entries and bank fraud charge alone carries up to 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

If Trumbull's partly filled courtroom was any indication, the alleged white collar crimes in question had limited drawing power. As it turns out, some in the audience were waiting for the next case of the day. And only representatives from the Monterey peninsula media were on hand.

Oliver remained insulated from the cameras and notebooks as he entered and left the courtroom, leaving the talking to Russoniello, who stressed his client derived "no benefit...from any of these financial dealings."

The alleged conspiracy begins with the bespectacled, gray-haired Hopkins, former chairman of the board of Commodore Savings Association in Dallas.

He made no plea because, as he told Trumbull, he could not afford an attorney.

"Straw purchasers"

He is charged with making loans to Oliver and the others, using them as stockholders, "straw purchasers" in the takeover of the Bank of Los Gatos, as the indictment terms them.

Of a $400,000 loan Oliver signed with Hopkins in April of 1984, the indictment reports the two men agreed Oliver would have "no personal liability to repay."

"This is a case," said John Mendez, United States Attorney for the Northern District, "in which businesses investments were made...without personal liability."

Mendez told reporters he expects the alleged conspirators "first line of defense" to cite statutes of limitations and other "technicalities...then to attack the substance of the charges."

After some discussion, Trumbull set Feb. 11 for the pretrial motions, for which the defendants do not have to appear. Those are scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m.

Town hall meeting prompts discussion over square

Carlos. Cars could drive into the parking lot — or through the parking lot onto 5th. Traffic, then, would still travel up the hill, but only from the parking lot.

A full closure at the bottom of 5th at Dolores, the preferred alternative, is known by the committee as Option 1. The second option leaves 5th open for cars to trickle up the hill. With that alternative, there is still room for a town square in front of the post office. However, the park area would be smaller.

Carmel resident Alan Williams complained that clotting 5th Avenue traffic would route bus traffic into the residential neighborhood. That, he argued, goes against everything residents and city officials have been trying to insure so far.

"You have to keep it so trucks can go through," he said. "I approve of the concept, but I have problems with both of these options," Williams said.

Lindsay Hanna, a resident and member of the Carmel Planning Commission, feared the 2016 Committee may be sending a mixed message: On one hand, people, limited to short term parking, are encouraged to circulate; on the other hand, the town plaza encourages them to stay a while.

Despite the potential problems with post office plans, some note that there is an opportunity for beautification and civic improvement at relatively little expense. "This is not a new idea, and it has been played around with for many years," Kruse said.

It came as a slight surprise to many that another idea — again, it was hardly new — revealed more support: building a parking garage at Sunset Center, and then sticking a post office on top of it. Kruse asked for a show of hands. Perhaps some 100 hands went up to say indeed it was a good idea.

The lease for the current post office building expires in January 1997.

Councilman Bob Fischer went on record as saying the two ideas — a town square, and a parking structure with post office — were not mutually exclusive. The former could be considered the short-term solution, the latter the long-term.

It has been widely expected, however, post office operations would stay at the same location.

Also at the town hall meeting, Mayor White gave a progress report on the search for a new city administrator.

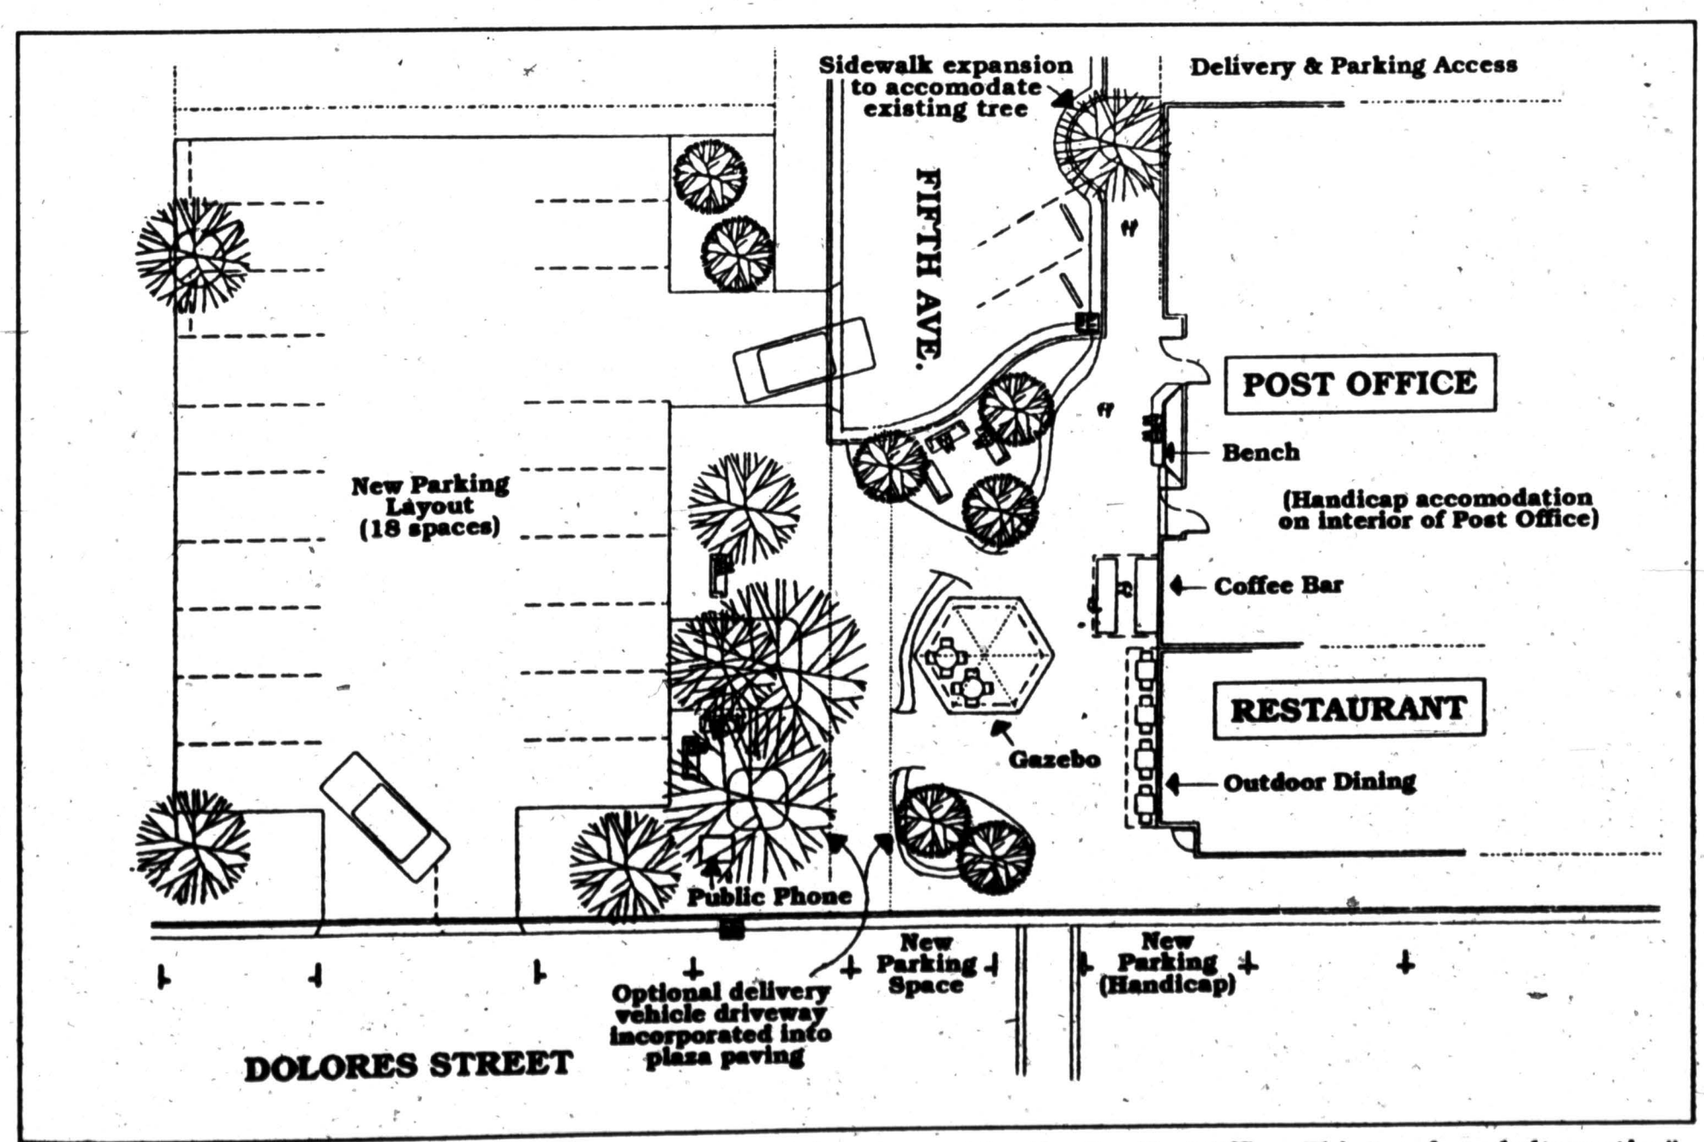
Nearly a year ago, Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio became the acting administrative head following the move of Doug Schmitz to the city manager post at Lake Oswego, Ore.

The city has retained a high-profile headhunting firm, Ralph Andersen & Associates, to track down the right person. In the meantime, council members are not afraid to kiss a few frogs.

White reported that 182 applications have so far been submitted. The firm's Bob Murray, who is acting as chief headhunter, said the barrage of applications is the greatest he has seen in about six years. "He is," White reported, "extremely pleased with their quality and number, and that there is a national interest in this position."

The city council is scheduled to go into closed session Jan. 19 to start weeding through the pile of resumes — with Murray's help.

The number will go down to five or six, and then, finally, to one.



THE 2016 Committee envisions a "town square" in front of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office. This "preferred alternative" would require the closure of 5th Avenue, although cars could get onto 5th by travelling through the parking lot.

Parking zones

THE CITY has returned a number of downtown parking zones back to one-hour parking from the temporary two-hour parking approved for the holiday season.

Streets affected are:

- Ocean Avenue between Junipero Avenue and Monte Verde Street.
- Junipero between 5th and 6th Avenues.
- Mission Street between 5th and 6th Avenues
- San Carlos Street between 5th and 6th.
- Dolores Street between 4th and 6th Avenue, and between 7th and 8th.
- Lincoln Street between 5th and 6th.
- 5th Avenue between Junipero Avenue and San Carlos Street.
- South side of 5th Avenue between Dolores and Lincoln.

The Ultimatum

Underground newsletter draws comment at CHS

By SCOTT BREARTON

AN UNDERGROUND weekly newsletter written by anonymous Carmel High School students surfaced on campus last week, drawing a challenge from administrators and school officials who dare the writers to come forward and "engage in a dialogue regarding their concerns."

Touting themselves as "Carmel's most scourging newspaper," the editors of The Ultimatum – using the pseudonyms "Visigoth" and "Vandal" – express their discontent with the educational system and justify publishing their newsletter under the First Amendment right to freedom of speech.

Filled with profanity and anti-administration rhetoric, the eight-page newsletter contains articles on student apathy, sexual conduct of freshmen girls, and the Carmel Unified School District's "Safe Homes" program. Copies were distributed on campus to students Jan. 7.

Most serious charges

The most serious charges were leveled against a CHS teacher whom an anonymous writer names and asserts has made "repeated sexual advances" on teen-age girls at the school. Though stopping short of specifics, the writer demands the teacher's resignation and immediate action by school district officials.

Both Carmel Unified School District Superintendent Vance Baldwin and CHS Principal Marie Ishida declined to comment on the alleged misconduct.

"That's a personnel matter," Baldwin said. "We won't get into that."

"I think we'd all be better served if they'll come forward so that we might engage in a dialogue regarding their concerns," Baldwin continued. "We consider this to be a derogatory and inappropriate approach. In my view, this is the wrong vehicle to initiate change."

According to Baldwin, there is no existing code governing the distribution of literature on the CHS campus, but he hinted that the school board may take action to halt circulation of The Ultimatum.

"We consider this to be a derogatory and inappropriate approach. In my view, this is the wrong vehicle to initiate change."
—Supt. Vance Baldwin

"We're going to take action against newspapers that are obscene or disruptive," Baldwin said, indicating the board is considering drawing up a policy specifically designed to halt the distribution of controversial literature on campus.

Ishida added:

"My first step is going to be is to try to meet with the individuals," she said. "I'm concerned that they made a lot of serious allegations and brought up some serious concerns in choosing to use this particular avenue. I'm disappointed that they didn't feel comfortable coming forward to express some of their concerns so that we could deal with them."

Four hundred-and-three signatures from registered voters were needed — amounting to 10 percent of registered voters.

The zoning package was approved by the Carmel City Council Dec. 8. Petitioners handed the signatures over just hours before their deadline. The county's office of elections now has 30 days to certify (or invalidate) the petition.

Simple majority

If the signatures are validated, the city council will be obligated to stage a referendum within 103 days, but not before 88 days. A simple majority would overturn the ordinance.

In December, the council approved the multi-faceted zoning ordinance. A key element — the part which Eisner and others object to — expands the "central-commercial" zoning district, which Eisner fears could pave the way for more commercialization in certain areas. The CC district allows for the most intensive uses, such as art galleries and jewelry stores.

The CC district has been located on Ocean Avenue to either side of Fifth Avenue to the north and almost to Seventh Avenue to the south. The council approved moving the CC line all the way to Seventh.

Much of the impetus behind the council's decision to expand the CC district was provide more flexibility to commercial property owners who, in effect, had their property "downzoned" in 1984.

In that year, a new zoning framework was instituted. It was then that a "service-commercial," designed to be a stronghold for resident-serving businesses, was established.

In approving the ordinance last month, the council majority was hoping to retain the useful aspects of the 1984 zoning overhaul, but also remedy the "injustices."

Caving in?

Eisner, who is the former publisher of The Pine Cone, further commented in his statement: "I believe the council majority caved in to the loud demands of landlords and their agents, and lost touch with the sentiments of the majority of Carmel citizens."

One of his major complaints about the December action is that, for all the hearings and studies held over two and a half years, a general plan review committee had never been convened to evaluate the ordinance.

Meanwhile, the prospect of a referendum reopens a subject discussed, studied and debated over for what every one agrees has been an oppressively long time.

"If this thing goes to a referendum, fine and dandy," said Councilman Bob Fischer, who favors the changes. "But if they are going to have their propaganda, then I am going to have mine."

With the submittal of the petition, the ordinance, which would have gone into effect on Jan. 8, is on hold until the election.

The ordinance also has provisions to speed up the permit process, reduce paper work for city staff and redefine what commercial uses go in each zoning district.

The last such referendum was held in April 1968. Residents upheld a December 1967 law to establish a use permit process for motels in the residential districts. Thus, the petitioners in that battle failed.

No stalling: water directors to push for June desal vote

By PAUL WOLF

IT WAS one water director's sly comment that the Monterey Peninsula Water Management's greatest skill has become waiting.

Take your pick — the Paralta well, the Sand City desalination plant, and the new dam. These are, respectively, the immediate water supply project, the near-term project and the long-term.

For related story see page 6

As Paralta is for the moment tied up in the environmental review process, directors are now gearing up for a June 8 vote on desalination.

And the chairman of the water board, Dale Hekhuis, is confident the timetable will be realized.

The election would ask citizens whether they wish to authorize the district's construction of the roughly $30 million plant. It would supply water to the peninsula district spanning from the southern portion of Fort Ord and Seaside at its south end, to the Carmel Highlands at the north end.

"I don't think it's going to be difficult at all to meet these deadlines," said Dale Hekhuis, who chairs the Monterey Peninsula Water Management board.

A key water district staff official agrees it's a ambitious goal.

"It is a tight time frame, and we are admitting that," said Margo Nottenkamper, the district's associate project planner, who's been the main staff resource on desalination. "It's tight for us, it's tight for the county and it's tight for the cities."

The water district's member jurisdictions, which include the City of Carmel, must each approve participating in an election before March 1. The reason is that each city must become part of the "benefit zone" for the desal plant. Residents in each city would help pay for the plant on their water bills, and, in, return the cities would share in the allocation of new water.

While Hekhuis and a majority of the directors support the project, they want to put it in the hands of the electorate. And both water directors and staff promise the information that will come the public's way will be unbiased as well as accurate and complete.

No "snow job," please

"I don't want a snow job," said Director Fran Farina, speaking in a phone interview.

Farina, while not speaking of the merits or demerits of the Sand City project itself, objects to the amount of money that has been spent on the proposal so far — without any direction from the public. (Nottenkamper placed that amount spent to date at roughly $1 million.)

"We can't just keep spinning our wheels."
—Jim Hughes

"I have worries that, with all the intense fervor (in support of the project), we won't get information that is balanced and impartial," Farina said. "I will watch this process with a keen eye."

Farina also believes the June timetable is "overly optimistic." Moreover, she said, "I don't know if such an important matter should be rushed."

At a water board meeting Dec. 14, directors received the final environmental impact report that profiled the Sand City alternative as presenting minimal potential impacts.

So it is ready to be put up for the judgement of the electorate. It would be the first true authorizing election in the district's history. To date, the district has held advisory votes.

The board also held a vigorous discussion on the election. Directors like Hekhuis, Jim Hughes and Kenneth Long said it was urgent to the get matter to the voters.

"We can't just keep spinning our wheels," Hughes said.

"The schedule," echoed Long, "is very tight, but we must put this in the voters hands."

Added Hekhuis, "We don't have the luxury of continued debate."

Farina remained cautious, but Director Dick Heuer candidly repeated his opposition to desal, and to the election itself.

Two projects

Preferring to put the district's energies into the dam — which may be a decade or more away from construction — Heuer said, "I don't believe we need two projects. I don't think the voters will support two projects. Once we have a dam we won't need desal anymore."

He added, Pushing desal now is being free and easy with people's money."

Yet getting the authorizing election on the June 8 ballot could save as much as $40,000, since it would be held concurrently with the scheduled Monterey County election. A special election would cost the district about $100,000, according to Nottenkamper.

As for scheduling the election, the board meeting last week showed the eagerness for an election had much to do with each director's eagerness for a desalting plant. True as that may be, all directors say they are not interested in swaying the voters one way or another.

Would a Sand City desal plant benefit Carmel?

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE FEW people expect the city council would not let the citizens vote on a proposal for a desalination plant, there is good reason to believe the proposal itself will be looked at closely.

Many are asking whether the Sand City plant would benefit the village.

For related story see page 5

"The amount of water in Carmel Valley in the aquifer and the river itself is enough to meet our needs," said Carmel resident Edwin Lee. The water (from desalination) would never get to our side of the hill. It's the people in Seaside and Monterey who really need that water."

March 1 deadline

By March 1, each city council must pass a resolution in order to participate in the Monterey Peninsula Water District's election on desal.

In all likelihood, no council is about to block a vote. That would be tantamount to "breaking up the water district," and no town would favor that, regardless of how its officials feel about desalination.

"There are lots of questions that will need to be answered," said one Carmel city staff official who requested anonymity. The source did not take a position, but stated: "Our user fees on our bills will go up. The question is, Will Carmel benefit?"

He added, "Are we going to pay dearly for this, and not need the water?"

Main objective

Lee's main objection to the plant is that, he believes, it would it would be the stops on the long-term dam project.

"You can't want people to endorse the spend $35 million for desalination, and then expect them to vote another $70 million for a dam," said Lee, who is a retired publisher. "They (the water directors) are not thinking. If desal were cheap enough, this would be a good project.

Carmel Mayor Ken White argued that, whatever may of may not be the concerns of council members about the proposed project, the voters should not be kept from expressing their wished. "The basic right of the people is to vote if you want to tax yourself," he said. "If that's what you want, then you should be able to do so."

Carmel High students to get 'close up' view of inauguration

By SCOTT BREARTON

TWENTY-ONE CARMEL High School students will travel to Washington D.C. this week to witness and participate in the inauguration of President-elect Bill Clinton and to learn first-hand how American government operates.

During their week in Washington, the students will join over 635 total high school students and teachers representing 22 California high schools, and about 3,000 participants from across the country for a special "focus week," sponsored by the Close Up Foundation.

CHS students will travel with those from Monterey and San Benito (Hollister) High schools, together representing the Central Coast area.

The Washington D.C. trip normally occurs in February, but when CHS organizers realized they could attend the presidential inauguration, they jumped on the earlier date.

"The exciting thing about this trip is that we get to go to the inauguration," said Kay Anderson, a Carmel Middle School counselor who will be chaperoning the excursion with her husband Robert Swartz, a history teacher at CHS . "It's a real coup for Carmel High."

Swartz explained that not all Central Coast high schools that applied for the trip were invited to go. "We consider it a real privilege to be invited," he said.

The teachers will also participate in a program designed to acquaint them with current issues in American politics and newer educational methods.

"They (Close Up) provide opportunities for teachers to be involved in curriculum workshops and meet congressmen," Swartz said, that in turn provides teachers with great "on-site experiences."

"Every year I go to Washington, I come back with new information and insights for my students," Swartz said. "The more I can make government come alive for them, the more effective my teaching becomes."

Not only will the group observe the actual swearing-in of the new president and vice-president, but they will also have their own inaugural balls and attend several seminars on the focus of the country. Close Up officials are working closely with the Presidential Inaugural Committee to arrange seminars with members of the Clinton administration.

The trip offers students the opportunity to see Washington as a living city by taking them into the historic buildings they often see only on television, and to question law- and policy-makers they may otherwise only read about.

"Through the experience we hope that they return home with an interest in both national and community affairs and will want to become involved," said Steve Janger, president of the Close Up.

The Close Up Foundation is a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization that provides opportunities to learn about the democratic process and the role of the citizen by providing first-hand experience to young people. Since 1971, more that 300,000 students and teachers have taken part in the program.

Neal Thompson, Senior Traffic Engineer

Jim Hilton, Area Supervisor

These men used their chain saws to cut through the "red tape" and are taking care of the reflectors and appropriate highway signs I requested.

You can all sleep well, knowing you have undoubtedly averted some tragedies waiting to happen.

Finally, we, the residents, and Charleen Dean, ABHOW Administrator for Pacific Meadows will cooperate fully with all agencies concerned, as well as the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA).

Let's all try to keep Carmel Valley clean, pristine and as rural as possible, because I am afraid this area is approaching a candidacy for the endangered area (not species) list. Please try another 48-hour speed check during rush hours. You will find few drivers who observe the 45 mph limit on our four-lane section - with 25 mph at the school/church zones.

All our thanks.

Residents took time out

Dear Editor:

Many thanks to the several hundred Carmel residents who took time from their busy holiday schedules to consider, discuss, and sign the petition to return to the city council its recent decision to extend the central commercial zoning ordinance. Hopefully, the council will rescind its action and appoint a representative committee to review the 1988 Revised General Plan which so firmly upholds the Carmel credo that the residential character of the city be preserved and protected.

If the council is unable to agree, even under the persuasive skills of Mayor Kennedy White, and if the signatures are firm, the voters of Carmel shall have the responsibility to determine the future direction of the city through the means of a special election. While the cost is prohibitive in face of recent cutbacks, the need to determine whether or not this decision of the council truly reflects the vision of the voters if even more important.

Poitras power

Dear Editor:

The family of Ramon Ranieri extends their sincere thanks to Detective Pete Poitras for his assistance in recovering some paintings Ramon had purchased from a gallery which is no longer in business.

When asked by Ramon on Dec. 28, 1992 what he could do to get back his paintings, Detective Poitras said he would look into it and get back to him. Within 24 hours Detective Poitras called Ramon to say he had the paintings and to come by and pick them up. The quick work of Detective Poitras and the assistance given by other gallery personnel and real estate personnel in your community to help us locate our son's paintings is to be commended.

We thank the people of the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea for their help to make our visit a pleasant occasion.

Police Beat

Burgalry rash

By PAUL WOLF

POLICE HAVE tentatively identified one person in connection with a rash of three burglaries at Carmel businesses.

The first incident dates back to late Sunday evening or Monday morning, when $3,500 was stolen from a portable safe at the Mail Mart. The business is located at Dolores Street and Fifth Avenue, across the street from the Carmel Post Office.

It appears the burglar (or burglars) snuck into the business before closing time. The culprit used hand tools to "pound open the safe," according to Carmel Sgt. Dan Clark.

Clark said there is reason to believe the person now tentatively identified is also connected with two other cash burglaries in the same neighborhood.

Second of three

The next incident occurred at Copies By The Sea, on Dolores between 5th and 6th. An unlocked window was opened, according to Clark. And a total of $160 was stolen.

"We need people to understand they must secure their premises before they leave," Clark said.

As for the third incident, $30 in change taken from the Pilgrim's Way Bookstore, on the same block. Only in this burglary was "forcible entry" required, Clark explained.

Other cash burglaries have been reported in recent weeks, but a connection between those and more recent incidents has not been clearly made.

Weather official confirms storm was tornado

By PAUL WOLF

OVER A month after a blustery storm caused an unusual amount of damage in Carmel and elsewhere on the peninsula, follow-up study has confirmed that it was a tornado passing through.

Robert Renard, a volunteer observer with the National Weather Service in Monterey, reports that a twister plowed through between 4:45 and 5 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6.

In mid-December, Renard was reluctant to call the storm damage the result of a tornado. Damage, for starters, included dozens of downed trees at the Del Monte Golf Course, and some injuries from shattered glass.

But, after further study from a staff official from the Redwood City National Weather Service, the call was made.

But it is hard to say whether Carmel was in the tornado's path, which appears to have run through parts of Monterey and Seaside.

"The message is, California is not immune from tornadoes," Renard said. "However, the chances of them taking place in this state are miniscule."

Making history

Renard said the Sunday event was the first tornado reported on the peninsula as long as he has lived here, since 1952.

In Carmel, an inordinate number of power lines, tree tops, and pine limbs were downed. "There could have been more than one tornado, but is common," Renard said. "Or it could have been that a very strong squall coming through, and that could have accounted for the damage that occurred near the confirmed tornado area."

Assessing a potential tornado includes looking at not just the amount of damage, but the type of damage, since tornados rotate and twist.

Ironically, Renard says winds in the tornado path may have exceeded 100 m.p.h., but the National Weather Service climate station site recorded winds of only 31 m.p.h.

In any case, as tornados go, this was a small one.

Smilin' in the rain

This unidentified couple was all smiles when the Pine Cone roving photographer snapped them at the top of Ocean Avenue near Hatton road and Highway 1. And who wouldn't smile: This year's rains are more than welcome after more than six years of drought-level rainfall.

Maradei will not seek new term as CRA president

DAVID MARADEI will not seek another term as president of the Carmel Residents Association, choosing to "take his retirement a bit more seriously."

Late last year, the 50-year-old Maradei retired as station manager of the Carmel-by-the-Sea Post Office. To a large extent, however, he has kept busy with his CRA leadership.

Maradei's term expires at the end of the month, and the CBA board is expected to select new officers. "I am trying to write a book, travel and get clear (of CRA business), Maradei explained. "I want to get into my retirement."

He said he is not sure to what extent he will follow and participate in civic affairs. Nor does he know whether he will stay on the CBA board. "No one is indispensable," he said.

Maradei is a veteran of the Carmel political scene. He served on the city council from 1982 to 1986.

Meanwhile, Maradei said the board has not taken an official stand on the referendum drive to overturn the downtown zoning ordinance, approved last month. (See related story in this issue.) He said the board will vote after the petition has been certified by the county election office.

So far, Maradei has tried to distance himself from the cause so that it would not appear as though the petition was prompted or carried out by the CRA.

Fort Ord's future

KSK reports local 'message heard' on Capitol Hill

By SUSAN BECK

KARIN STRASSER Kauffman, a Monterey County Supervisor, was a member of the team of county officials that set out for Capitol Hill last week in an effort to obtain federal assistance for the planning of Fort Ord's future.

"It was a very productive trip," said Strasser Kauffman.

She said that after a long series of discussions, at times rather heated, with the Clinton transition team, the response at the end was that, "our message was definitely heard and would be acted on."

The message was that the White House must establish a position at the highest level of authority for the conversion of the base.

"We need to go on," said Strasser Kauffman.

The three important issues for Fort Ord are environmental protection, reuse and economic development, she added.

"We have to make the environment the key element of Fort Ord. I'm convinced if we don't, the whole thing will fall apart. After reviewing the environmental constraints, then we can look at jobs and housing," said Strasser Kauffman, "not the other way around."

She added that unlike other bases in the nation, Fort Ord has hundreds of acres of sensitive habitat.

"A sensitive habitat is not of concern when planning a military mission, but it should be of primary concern when planning for reuse and economic conversion. We need a different kind of expertise to deal with Fort Ord," she said.

"We need some personnel who has direct access with the president and authorities who can deal with development and habitat."

After making a persuasive argument the Army agreed to hire a contractor who would be able to deal with land-use issues within the next several weeks.

Strasser Kauffman stressed the urgency for public input into the scoping of the contract.

Roger Williams

Valley resident is a man of action in community affairs

By SUSAN BECK

CARMEL VALLEY resident Roger D. Williams, Sr. doesn't think he can ever repay his community for all the wonderful things it has done for him.

But, few would agree with him.

He is tireless in community affairs, and doesn't have any plans to change. Well, at least he doesn't plan to join any more organizations.

"I feel that some time in every person's life they should serve on some civic organization," said Williams.

One civic endeavor is not enough for him, however, and so he is on several boards.

He has just become the 1993 president for the Carmel Valley Properties Owners Association (CVPOA).

He is also the president for the Monterey County Sheriff's Advisory Council, a founding member of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC), a board member of the Carmel Foundation and the Foundation for the Monterey County Free Libraries.

He is very pleased with his latest project for the county's free libraries.

"I just wrote the speculation for the purchase of the first of two new bookmobiles," said Williams. The new purchases became possible because of an anonymous gift of more than $100,000 to the free library foundation. "This is a great opportunity for the community."

Williams was also the president of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA). He established the spay-neuter clinic, and the wildlife center. In addition, he started the first mobile patrol for the entire county.

One might think he'd miss a luncheon or meeting now and then with all this activity, but his wife of more than 50 years, Dodie, keeps him on schedule.

"We have to make a date to play golf," said Williams.

The two were neighbors back in Shaker Heights, Ohio. Both of their fathers were presidents of corporations. Her grandfather assisted Warren Packard in building the first Packard motor car in Warren, Ohio. Her father, Alfred Harris, invented the first four-color lithographic rotary press.

Williams' father, Ramond, invented the application of porcelain enamel on sheet steal without which we would not have all those beautiful appliances that we use today.

However, when they decided to elope, the comforts of their families' life-style became a thing of the past. They were on their own.

It was the depression in Illinois where Williams had taken a job with General Motors. They lived in two rooms in an old residential hotel near the railroad tracks. He had the nightshift.

"It was the bottom on the barrel," said Williams. "Nothing is as cold as out in the prairie in Burwin, Illinois."

Over the next 22 years at General Motors he did everything from sweeping the floors to becoming the general sales manager of the diesel division in Cleavland, Ohio.

When WW II erupted he worked with the United States Navy Bureau of Ships trouble shooting in the forward areas of the Pacific.

After retirement

After he retired, he took his family, which now included two sons, Roger, Jr. and Dale, and a daughter, Sandra, to Atherton because it had one of the best high schools in the county.

But, his retirement didn't last long. He got restless and bought into a manufacturing company in Palo Alto. He was the president of the business for five years and then decided to sell it.

He then formed a new corporation developing conduits for Minute Man Missile Bases in the Northwest. After five years as president of that company, he decided to sell again.

While in Atherton, the resurgence of interest for Carmel Valley started again.

Williams first came to the Monterey Peninsula in 1936. His father wanted to play golf on all of the major golf courses from the Mexican border to Jasper Park, British Columbia, which of course, included Pebble Beach and Cypress golf courses.

Young Williams was his father's caddy, but since both golf courses had their own private caddies, he was free to go off on his own.

He headed down the coast. At Carmel Valley Road he decided to drive east. The drive lead him to Rosie's Cracker Barrel.

"Rosie had just leased it from Frank Porter," said Williams. "It has been the Frank Porter Real Estate office in Robles del Rio. I immediately loved the valley. I

Carmel River

Fishing is out

By SUSAN BECK

WITH THE Carmel River is running full speed, some of you probably have all of your fishing flies in order, thinking about getting a few Steelhead on the line.

But, that won't happen this year, at least not legally. It's now a crime to catch a Steelhead.

As of Dec. 23, 1992, the California State Department of Fish and Game declared Steelhead fishing closed indefinitely.

"This was an action pursuant to public recommendation that the status of the Steelhead was reduced as a result of the drought," said Keith Anderson, Senior Fishery Biologist for department of fish and game.

Several law enforcement fish and game wardens and lieutenants are patrolling Carmel River, and if someone is caught fishing for Steelhead, their fate will be decided by a judge.

In addition, there are sign posted about the new ruling. Also, when you call to find

Williams sets new goals for CVPOA

had never seen anything as beautiful. Everything was here. The ocean, golf courses, and at that time, there wasn't even a village."

Now, more than 20 years later, he began visiting the peninsula regularly. On one of the family jaunts to Carmel Valley, he heard about the new Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

The county-club house Mrs. Williams liked best was being occupied by the club's owner, Ed Haber.

He asked her how soon she would like to move in. She replied, "tomorrow." Haber was out the next day.

In 1980, Williams, along with his son, Dale, and an associate, opened the Valley Village Self-Storage, which has enjoyed continued success.

The Williams now live in the home across from Los Laureles Lodge, which was once the lodge's horse stables. After 15 years, the house is almost completely renovated. There are no plans to move again, ever.

He may never move again, but that doesn't mean he won't always be on the go.

"When I worked for General Motors I traveled 200 days a year all over the country," said Williams. "That created a momentum that I couldn't let go entirely."

He loves variety and projects. Long lists of things to do.

"There are so many things that need direction," said Williams. "When I get a project in mind, I can't really relax until I have the answers."

As the incoming president of CVPOA, he already has a few ideas of how he would like the next year to go.

"The board of directors is only as strong as it members. We need to be more in touch with valley residents," said Williams.

"Directors shouldn't act upon their own feelings, they should act upon behalf of the membership."

His goal is to open the lines of communication with other valley property owners associations. And, he hopes that more valley residents will come to the meetings and say what's on their mind about the community.

"We lost sight of the need to stay in contact with our community," said Williams. "We were aggressively in conflict with county government, environmentally conscious, but forgot about the beauty and pleasure of living in the valley. We took a no growth stance, but that just isn't possible. We must try to avoid supporting unpopular causes."

His love and appreciation for Carmel Valley is why he helped found CVVIC.

"We rarely came to the village," said Williams. "It was apparent the village was in a state of deteriorate. Somehow, it made you feel bad. I wanted to do something, but what can you do as an individual?"

A group of businessmen got their heads together and pulled resources, which has resulted in a pathway project connecting the village east to west, and much more.

"These same guys, Lou Allaire, Lew Gardner, Randy Randazzo, and Peter Coakley, can invariably be asked to do something, and its done," said Williams.

"Carmel Valley is tops. The people in it lack a sense of selfishness that is unbelievable. I love it so much. It is so rare."

THE CARMEL Valley Village Improvement Committee (CVVIC) will present its Fourth Annual "Village Affair," on Monday, Jan. 18, at Los Laureles Lodge on Carmel Valley Road.

Environment key point says KSK

"We need to have intensive public input on this issue. Fort Ord will effect the quality of life on the peninsula more than most other issues in the past. We have a double challenge of land-use restoration planning and economic conversion."

She said that Clinton campaigned successfully with a strong platform of military to civil conversion.

"We require some action now. We are part of that set of promises, and we want to make sure that we don't get stuck in the base closure mode. The property at Fort Ord must be properly utilized," said Strasser Kauffman.

Her position of the national picture is that Fort Ord is unique and can serve as a role model. "My argument was that the key point is to make sure that the conversion of Fort Ord is successful."

Grant application

The local team also met with members of the Pentagon to discuss a grant application of $4.8 million from the Office of Economic Adjustment. The grant is necessary to prepare for the Fort Ord reuse plan.

"A realistic planning course to accommodate a sound infrastructure, the habitat, and projects such as a new university, agriculture center, and a marine related facility requires a lot of money," said Strasser Kauffman.

The usual request for this type of assistance is $70- $200,000, but she was encouraged that the matter will be looked into.

"We need to have the proper tools and solid expertise," she said, "We can't keep working with just a wish list."

Another $100 million defense appropriation grant was discussed with U. S. Senators Diane Finstein and Barbara Boxer for the fiscal year 1994.

The grant will be used to retrofit the existing buildings at Fort Ord for a future university campus.

"I had strong verbal assurances from both Finstein and Boxer that they would be supportive," said Strasser Kauffman.

"That is particularly significant because Finstien has just been placed on the Senate Appropriations Committee."

She added that a great deal of follow-up needs to be set in motion because without a doubt this will be is a long-term project for our community."

CV Ranch Resort

New owner expected by April

By SUSAN BECK

CARMEL VALLEY Ranch Resort is expected to be sold by the first of April.

Nick Marotta, a founder of the exclusive resort, said that bids for the property will be accepted from Feb. 1 to March 31.

Last year, the development was taken over by the federal Resolution Trust Corp. (RTC) when its parent company, Landmark Land Co., went bankrupt.

Carmel Valley Ranch, along with 23 other properties all over the United States, will be sold to pay creditors. The ranch is a solvent corporation and did not file Chapter 11.

This type of sale brings the selling price considerably lower than in a regular sale's transaction offering an opportunity for more people to bid.

Marotta holds 12.5 percent of the resort's shares and plans to bid for full ownership.

"I'm going to bid, but I'm not as optimistic as I was," said Marotta.

RTC is planning to set up a library of documentation for potential buyers in New Orleans, La.

"Everything a buyer needs to know about Landmark's holding will be there," said Marotta.

He said that a $50,000 refundable deposit is required to review the contents of the library.

"A normal transaction takes two to three months," said Marotta. "This process will quickly separate the lookers from the buyers."

Ed Haber, owner of Quail Lodge and Quail Meadows subdivision, said that he is also looking into the prospect of purchasing Carmel Valley Ranch.

"Some members of the ranch asked me to look into it," said Haber. "They think we do a good job and would feel more secure having someone local take over the operation."

As far as projecting what kind of changes would be made if Haber did indeed become the new owner of Carmel Valley Ranch he said. "We haven't gone that far. We have to see how they are doing. The numbers have a lot to do with it."

The existing resort includes a hotel, golf course, tennis club and 300 acres designated as land reserve. There are a possible 105 units still to be built.

out what days are open to fishing, a recording will tell you there aren't any.

Last year Steelhead fishing was catch and release only, but it turns out that there was still a mortality related to the practice, said Anderson.

Members of the Carmel River Steelhead Association and several individuals suggested that fishing be restricted until the Steelhead are able to support sport fishing.

For that to happen, said Anderson, it would require the Steelhead to run in the hundreds, whereas, now they are only running in the dozens.

Previously, Roy Thomas, past president of the Steelhead association, said that the continued drought and overdraft of the Carmel River was destroying the riparian corridor.

He added that the animal life along the river bank was diminishing, and the Steelhead was only surviving through the efforts of the association.

A buck on the run

WE RETURNED to Robert Trent Jones' scene of the crime last weekend and it brought back fresh memories of five years ago when we were first victims of the Links at Spanish Bay.

After barely surviving a golf writers' blessing of the course in 1987, we joked within RTJ Jr.'s hearing that we'd like to find the SOB who designed such a sadistic spread. Bob, who is actually an all right guy, hunched his shoulders in mock fear. He knew he had a winner and so did we.

Of course, as Jones' co-conspirators, Tom Watson and Sandy Tatum also had much to say about Spanish Bay and the threesome's influence returned to us in memories of a private time we once shared during the construction of the course.

It was the 12th hole and Tom, Sandy and Bob strongly debated the placement of a left side fairway bunker. Should it be visible or hidden? They finally compromised in setting it up from the tee so it could at least be partially seen.

We saw the bunker last weekend and thought of that debate just before hitting our tee shot directly into its belly. Thanks, guys. We needed that.

Until then our round had been a quiet one. In fact, with the exception of four guys who spent more time bending over their putts than the slowest PGA Tour player and a Japanese threesome which wouldn't let a single play through, the course was relatively vacant and silent.

So, there was plenty of time to linger along the fairways as we moved from shot to shot. And [illegible] those circumstances, no pressure from the back, no opening to the front, long waits over the ball, the game and the course took on an entirely different cloak.

We met Bob Larson of Carmel, one of the friendliest course marshalls we've ever encountered. He filled some long moments with his encouraging views of The Pine Cone.

There was the old buck running through an environmental sensitive area with such one-minded determination that we could only surmise the feds were after him.

And the four guys with money on the line with each putt finally, but grimly, waved us through.

The three Japanese continued to hack and saw their way around the course, occasionally leaving behind huge red tees that looked like they had been hand-carved from exported Oregon firs.

And in about four hours, not a bad round-trip time, we concluded our outing, glad to be there, ready to try it again, because — as Jones, Watson and Tatum know, the Links at Spanish Bay is a course unto its self, a course to be savored under any circumstances.

Padre Sports Review

Padres squeak past visiting Australians

AFTER BEATING an undermanned King City team last Tuesday, the Carmel boy's basketball team played and won their most exciting game of the year againt the touring Vikings of Blackbourne, Australia.

Last Tuesday against King City the Padres opened their league season on a positive note, as they won 39-32. The game, which was rather slow-paced featured R.J. Powell scoring 16, Ben Fahrer with 13, and Jason Lindgren adding six.

Last Friday, the Padres had scheduled a non-league game with the touring team from Blackbourne. Not much was known about the Australians, but they looked good in pre-game warm-ups, as both teams put on a dunk fest the drew a chorus of oohs and aahs from the crowed. The CHS gym was packed for the game and the crowd got into the action early chanting "USA, USA," while the starting lineups were being announced.

The talented Blackbourne team took an early lead, 15-9 after one quarter, but the Padres roared back to take a 36-27 lead at the half. The two teams traded the lead in the third and fourth quarters, but with five ticks left on the clock, and the Padres with the ball, the score was tied at 54 a piece. Now tell me folks, who do you think shot the ball? Yes, none other than R.J. Powell dropped in the final two-pointer for the Padres to ice the win.

While the game itself was exciting, it was the energy of the crowd that made the game as good as it was. They became electrified by outstanding plays at both ends of the court. Leading the Padres was Nate Stiles who scored six of his 18 points by way of the three-point shot, and Powell who finished with 15. Ben Fahrer also added nine, and Jason Edward contributed eight. These games were a good start for the Padres as they prepare to face tougher opponents in the weeks to come.

Girls Basketball

The Padre girls split their first two league games of the season by losing to perenial league champion King City, and then beating Santa Catalina.

Last Tuesday the Padres dropped a tough game to a huge King City team by the score of 50-34. Doreen Evans scored 14 and Erin Kraft added 10 in the losing effort. Then on Friday, just before the boys played Australia, the Padres beat up on Santa Catalina as they won 54-40. Doreen Evans had 18, Kraft scored 15, and Jen Rosenthal added eight to move the teams league record to 1-1.

JEN ROSENTHAL shoots two in the Padres' 54-40 win over Santa Catalina.

Soccer

The Padre soccer team dropped a pair of games last week as they fell victim to the rain and mud against York and Palma.

"We found out that we don't shoot the ball real well in the mud," said head coach Jeff Wright.

The Padres lost the first game, last Wednesday, against Palma 3-1, with the lone Padre goal being scored by Santiago Lozano. The other loss, 2-0 to York, took place last Friday.

The magic of Milan

AFTER FIVE years of culinary obscurity, the future of The Bay Club restaurant at The Inn at Spanish Bay has brightened. The Bay Club has embarked on an international relationship with a world famous chef and is now the only restaurant in the United States serving the Northern Italian cuisine of Three-Star Michelin Chef Gualtiero Marchesi.

When it first opened the signature restaurant overlooking the waters of Spanish Bay was best described as a "French continental gourmet smoke house" complete with a high tech red lacquer smoker. An array of smoked meats didn't draw crowds so Northern Italian was the next logical stage in The Bay Club's evolution. But this style wasn't well-defined until Pebble Beach Vice President John Chadwell recruited Chef Gualtiero Marchesi.

Because of his international background and hotel expertise Chadwell, who is also general manager of Pebble Beach Resorts, knew Marchesi's reputation and made personal contact with him in Milan to propose the concept of a chef exchange program. Marchesi agreed, in part perhaps, due to the world renowned reputation of Pebble Beach.

As a result, Spanish Bay's Drew Previti, chef of The Bay Club, has gone to Milan to study Marchesi's techniques for the past one-and-one-half years. In kind, Davide Oldani, Marchesi's sous-chef, came to Spanish Bay to train The Bay Club staff in this innovative, but classical interpretation of food.

Last weekend, Marchesi, Oldani, several well-known San Francisco restaurateurs and members of the press gathered at Spanish Bay to witness the culmination of this international union. Modesto Lanzone, former owner of Vanessi's, Julius Castle, Giovanni, Lanzone and today's Opera Plaza, Elka Gilmore, namesake of the hot, new Elka in the Miyako Hotel, Susan Walker, chef-owner of the SOMA district's Ristorante Ecco and the fabled Cypress Club's John Cunin, all discerning critics, sampled dishes prepared in the sophisticated but simple style of Marchesi.

Elka Gilmore, whose restaurant has a French-Japanese influence, commented on Marchesi's intellectual and philosophical approach to food.

"Marchesi broke tradition in Italy," she said. "He's a minimalist and de-emphasized sauces, concentrating on each course in a simple way. Italians love their first courses; antipasto, pasta and rice, but Marchesi eliminated the first course and stopped serving pasta."

Marchesi himself, with the assistance of his friend Modesto Lanzone, as interpreter, further explained the artistic innovations that earned him Three Michelin Stars .

"Some people say I'm controversial, and if cooking in the modern way is controversial, then it's true. I trained in France, and people may think what I do is French, but it is not. The climate in Italy is warmer, the people more expressive and free-minded than the French," he said. "For those reasons, Italian food is lighter, more balanced."

After listening attentively to Marchesi, Lanzone offered an aside. "He's an explorer. When I first went into the restaurant business, I knew I had to go to Milan, to Marchesi. We've been friends for many years." He smiled fondly. "I'm always waiting to see what he will do next."

"Equilibrium on a menu is important," Marchesi continued, as Lanzone, who speaks Italian fluently, tried to keep up with the chef's rapid train of thought.

"His mind moves so fast," laughed Lanzone.

To demonstrate his point, Marchesi asked for a menu from his Milan restaurant and pointed to the brush strokes of color on the cover. Orange, blue, yellow, red, green, black, purple; splashes of color from an artist's palette on a stark white background are Marchesi's creative way of expressing the all-important equilibrium.

"Each color signifies a course of the meal," he explained. "A light course, then heavy, then perhaps wash your mouth with a salad. I am a conceptual person and like to balance a meal. "

Dishes served during this culinary weekend included "Marinated salmon with dill and pear sauce," "Broccoli mousse with mussels," Marchesi's accidental invention, "Open ravioli," "Risotto with bone marrow red wine sauce," "Deep fried filets of sole with sweet and sour sauce," "Halibut filet with artichokes," "Squab with Tocolato wine and sauteed spinach with golden raisins and pinenuts" and "Noisette of lamb gratine with white wine sauce and potato fan with black truffle."

The Bay Club now has reason to be proud of its Northern Italian cuisine. Marchesi's creations are not the "Cal-Ital" style of goat cheese and sun-dried tomatoes we've grown accustomed to but a thinking man's distillation of unique tastes. It has taken an extra effort, or as Marchesi said, "the heart and soul of a dedicated chef," to make it work. Marchesi's dishes, executed by Chef Drew Previti, exactly as they are served in Milan, comprise the core of the new Bay Club menu. Daily items are Previti's interpretations of what he has learned from the master, and are prepared utilizing the freshest ingredients available.

Will the "magic of Milan" make The Bay Club famous? Only time and the test of the personal palate will tell.

The 1993 Zagat San Francisco Bay Area Restaurant Survey recently named local restaurants Fresh Cream and Pacific's Edge among the top 20 in the "Highest Food Ratings" category. Pacific's Edge was the top rated newcomer to the survey. Carmel's Giuliano's was named "Top Northern Italian" in the cuisine section.

The country western song, "I'm Just An Old Lump of Coal... But I'll be a Diamond Someday," is the perfect theme for The Ritz Carlton Hotel's "Black Winter Truffle Festival." Perigord truffles, black diamonds of the culinary world, resemble lumps of coal and sell for $500 per pound. Small crops, painstaking harvests, a singular growing environment, costly transportation and international scandals make authentic black Perigord truffles more valuable than gold. This pungent fungus will be featured in the award-winning Dining Room in dishes such as "Risotto with Fresh Sliced Black Truffles" and "Fresh Sauteed Foie Gras with Truffle Port Sauce." The Festival is scheduled for Feb. 5 -13. Call 415/ 296-7465 for information.

The Cat Lady of Carmel

NO DOUBT many of you "animal people" already know about Rita DeRoche, Carmel's official Cat Lady. If you don't know about her and her tireless work on behalf of our feline friends, you should — so please read on.

I don't know of anyone who can get the job done better than Rita. She goes from morning 'til night and all of her energy is directed to helping kitty-cats in need. How many people do you know who would leave a safe, warm, cozy house late to night to take food to starving wild cats? Rita does, and she, her husband and a small group of volunteers are constantly trapping feral cats so that they can be spayed or neutered and receive medical attention. I shudder to think how many more thousands of kitty-cats would be wandering our streets if it weren't for this incredible lady's efforts.

Of course, Rita has many kittens and cats available for adoption, but only "perfect partners" need apply. Rita makes certain that her orphans go to excellent homes and she's always there to help if problems arise.

If you love animals and have some time on your hands, I know that Rita would love to hear from you. She always needs help with trapping cats, running them back and forth to her vet, feeding strays, and countless other tasks. Perhaps one of your New Year's resolutions will be to reach out and help this dear lady and her four-legged friends. Please call us at 625-4017 and we'll put you in touch with the Cat Lady of Carmel.

For senile dogs...

Thanks to the efforts of a researcher at Kansas State University's College of Veterinary Medicine, a drug is being tested that may alleviate the symptoms of senility in dogs. This causes them to lose interest in their environment and owners, to lose bladder control, wander around aimlessly and not respond to commands. Three senile dogs have been treated with a drug called L-Deprenyl and it has allowed them to return to normal function. Deprenyl can also be used for dogs with Cushing's disease.

As is the case with all new drugs, more clinical tests are required and the FDA must then approve Deprenyl. In the meantime, if your doggy displays any of the above symptoms, please see your veterinarian immediately.

See you next week!

Talent at Carmel High

CARMEL HIGH is a school with many musically-inclined students and, over the past couple years, CHS has seen a handful of bands attempting to make their mark in the rock and roll scene. Now at CHS, there's a new band called 40 Thieves whose aim is to have all the fun they can in making music, as well as in making their mark.

This band of five (four of whom attend CHS) was formerly named Kindred, but they decided to change their name because of a band in Los Angeles with the name Kindred Spirit. The two names were too similar, and originality is an important thing to 40 Thieves.

"They have a lot of talent," said fan Bjorn Ibsen. "For how long they have been playing, they are pretty confident. I like their laid back style."

At times, maybe too laid back, for lead singer Brian Purdy, who claims that sometimes they slack off in their practicing. "Other times, it is very exciting because we love what we do," said Purdy. "We're not only interested in playing music, but we're interested in having a good time, and that helps our music."

40 Thieves, a band stemming from both blues and the Seattle grunge influence, has nine full songs and are currently working on a lot more. Titles include Broken, Which Way, and Of What There Is To Know. The music is written in a joint effort from all the musicians and all lyrics are composed by the lead singer, Purdy.

Lead guitarist Jeremy MacRae also performs his own creation, a solo guitar song entitled Hidden Sardens. "I'm always routing for him," said Jeremy's brother Josh MacRae, a senior at CHS. "Its good to have somebody you know in a band. He's really good and I'm proud of him."

The band's rhythm guitarist, Justin Saunders, is currently studying to become a stronger asset to the band at the Guitar Institute of Technology in Hollywood. 40 Thieves plans to get a substitute guitarist until Saunders' return in April.

MacRae, a sophomore who has been playing the guitar for almost four years, also plans to attend the Guitar Institute of Technology, but not until he finishes high school. "Hopefully it will boost me," said MacRae.

40 Thieves has been together as a band since the middle of last summer. "We fought a lot at the beginning," said drummer Jason Sherman, who has been playing the drums for four years. "Getting a place to play was hard, too," Sherman said.

So far the band has had two gigs; one of which was at CHS, and the other was at the Carmel Youth Center.

"As far as seriousness goes, we have reached our pinnacle," said bassist Kyle Wirtz. Sherman, however, has hopes to begin recording by this summer.

"I enjoy being in the band because everyone else in it is my friend," Wirtz said. Although it may have been a challenge at the start, he added, "the band evolved from a friendship" and therefore has strong ties.

"We just want to be the best band we can," says Purdy.

Mother Marie Aimee

Mother Marie Aimee, one of five nuns who came to Carmel in 1925 to establish the Monastery of Carmelite Nuns near Point Lobos, died Jan. 5. in the morning at the monastery. She was 95.

Born Sept. 14,1897, in Pullman, Wash., she entered the Carmelite Order at Santa Clara in 1919 and made her first profession of vows in September 1920. The original house where the five nuns began the Carmel Carmelite community was located near Carmel Point, across a field from Robinson Jeffers' Tor House.

Mother Marie Aimee held the office of prioress of the monastery for 23 years. She had been the last surviving nun among the five who established the monastery.

She is survived by three sisters, Eleanor Buckley of Santa Cruz, Olivia Sullivan of Southern California and Thomasina Foley of San Jose.

A funeral Mass was celebrated at the monastery chapel by her nephew, the Rev. Thomas Buckley, of the Society of Jesus, and several other priest friends, followed by burial in the monastery crypt. Mission Mortuary was in charge of arrangements.

Paul Thomas Artellan

Paul Thomas Artellan, of Pacific Grove, who gave his heart to his community for most of his life before he received a heart transplant three years ago, died Jan. 1 at the University of California-San Francisco Medical Center. He was 61.

Mr. Artellan, who was a Marines Corps veteran of the Korean War and a volunteer fireman, was born May 19, 1931, in Monterey.

The Rev. Clifford E. Wilson

The Rev. Clifford E. Wilson, retired chaplain of Robert Louis Stevenson School, died Dec. 31 at his Pacific Grove home. He was 90.

Father Wilson, who was known as "Coach," was born in Fulton County, Ill., on Aug. 7, 1902. He received his nickname during the 22 years he spent at St. Michael's School, an Indian mission in Ethete, Wyo.

He was ordained as an Episcopal priest on the Indian reservation, which served Arapahoe and Soshone tribes, in 1943.

Raised on a farm, Father Wilson graduated from high school in Lewiston, Ill. An outstanding athlete and runner, he tried out for the 1924 Olympic track trials in Chicago.

He was encouraged to attend college by Harold Osborne, an Olympic gold-medal winner from the University of Illinois who had noticed Father Wilson's athletic ability. Father Wilson attended the University of Illinois before transferring to the University of Wyoming.

Following graduation, he worked as a high school football, basketball and track coach in Kemmerer, Wyo., for eight years, then accepted the job at the Indian mission. During his tenure as coach, the mission school had four undefeated years in basketball.

The school later was destroyed by a fire and Father Wilson accepted the chaplain's post at RLS, arriving in 1958. During his years at RLS, he filled many jobs, from teaching to coaching the basketball and rifle teams.

Though he stepped down in 1985 as chaplain, he remained chaplain emeritus and at the age of 85 was still putting in eight hours a day at the school. In 1987, RLS added a new dormitory that was named in honor of Father Wilson and his late wife, Marie, who died in 1982.

He is survived by a son, C.E. Wilson Jr. of Pacific Grove; a daughter, Maxine Sutton of Albuquerque, N.M.; four granddaughters, and three greatgrandsons.

Memorial services were held at Erdman Chapel at RLS. The Paul Mortuary was in charge of cremation and ashes were scattered at sea.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. on Jan. 15 at Keck Auditorium at RLS.

The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to Robert Louis Stevenson School for a scholarship fund in his name.

Father Farrell's Wisdom

'To fight the good fight'

ST. TIMOTHY WAS the first Bishop of Ephesus in Asia Minor, now part of Turkey. He was the most beloved and trusted disciple of St. Paul of Tarsus. When he was a young man, Paul wrote him this advice: "Stop drinking water only and use a little wine for your stomach's sake and your frequent illnesses."

In the same series of letters, he warns Timothy against being a drinker and a brawler and not to be "double tongued and given to much wine." St. Paul, like most good men, was not a fanatic. He thought that "in vin media stat virtus" ("In the middle way lies virtue"). He exhorted Timothy to be moderate but not stuffy—to pursue the good life with love, patience and mildness.

Oh Lord, help us to follow Paul's advice, to fight the good fight. May we refrain from counting days but make each day count. Finally, in a Santa Fe, N.M. paper I read this filler. Little Panchito asked, "Mamacita, do men get to heaven? I have never seen a picture of an angel with a beard."

"Si, Panchito, some men get to heaven but only by a close shave."

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Even at age 89, Dr. Benjamin Spock stayed involved in updating his best-selling book, "Baby and Child Care." Dr. Spock had the help of a collaborator in the latest edition of his book, which has sold 40 million copies since 1946. At that time, feeding and napping were governed by timetable and parents were told not to pick up or hug a crying baby. Dr. Spock's book encouraged parents to use common sense in meeting a baby's needs. "You know more than you think you do," he wrote.

A study focusing on early retirement has found some differing patterns among men and women. University of Miami researchers found that three out of four early retirees are men, although there are about the same number of working women as men in the 40-60 age group. About half of the men who retire early continue to work to earn income. But when women retire early, less than 20 percent seek work.

Wonder warms

By JOHN DETRO

OVER THE past few weeks, this winter's kisses have turned rough and cold.

Most of us can't afford hibernation or extended stays on the Spanish Riviera. So let's wrap ourselves in what's often called The Sense of Wonder.

Its aspects bring forth other bits of language — magic, awe, charisma, delight, cohesion, even inevitability (the surprise which seems in retrospect to have been planned forever), fine art, healthy paradox.

Certain current developments feel as though they have one or more of these aspects at their cores. Respecting the Wonder, then, the very human urge toward light and warmth—

Clint's time?

Carmel's most famous resident — the witty and charismatic Clint Eastwood — continues to gather critical praise as Oscar Night draws closer.

Hollywood insiders believe that his Unforgiven (the thinking person's Western) probably will be nominated as Best Picture. He stands an excellent chance of pulling down Best Director and Best Actor nominations as well.

The National Society of Film Critics now has voted it last year's finest movie and Clint the top director. The screenplay by David Webb Peoples also has been cited along with Gene Hackman (best supporting actor for his portrayal of a sadistic lawman).

Previously, the Los Angeles Film Critics Association made the same choices, additionally honoring Eastwood as the actor deserving first place.

Professional observers of that scene indicate that the Best Actor category could pack together old pros — Clint, Jack Nicholson, Jack Lemmon. Oscar nominations will be announced Feb. 17 with the winners named on March 29.

Clint's charisma: gritty magic and Oscar possibilities.

Wolf paths

Wonder and wildness permeate the 500-page book entitled Women Who Run with the Wolves. Word of mouth has made it a national bestseller from Ballantine ($20).

The author? A bright-faced Jungian analyst named Clarissa Pinkola Estes. Sponsored by San Jose Center for Poetry and Literature, Dr. Estes will hold a retreat workshop at the Asilomar grounds. Friday through Sunday, Jan. 15-16-17.

Space is limited. Call 1-345-3470 for full information (such as various cost levels) and registration.

On Saturday night, Jan. 16, with Monterey Peninsula College English Department co-sponsoring, Dr. Estes will give a public talk starting at 8 p.m. in the MPC Theater.

Tickets are priced $10 apiece and seating will be open. Advance ducats may be bought at Monterey Bay Coffeehouse Bookshop in downtown Monterey.

In both settings, Dr. Estes will explore themes flowing from the Wild Woman archetype celebrated by her book. "My approach is not one of self-help but one of healing," she emphasizes.

Dr. Estes says the Wild Woman is in all women. By contacting that locus, she adds, women can break through certain traps — doing too much, not serving individual artistic needs, being too tired, too depressed, "too out of touch with the natural side of life and soul."

The author and analyst also is Colorado's official cantadora or "keeper of the old stories in the Hispanic tradition." Born of Mexican parents, she was adopted by a family of "fiery Hungarians." She draws from both oral traditions as well as from myths and fairy tales.

Dr. Estes says her second book will share "myths and stories of the Dangerous Old Women and the power of age."

Clarissa Pinkola Estes: healing wildness.

One small structure

The guest of theater figure Morgan Stock, I have attended meetings of the private group which has had and protected the Ed Ricketts Lab on Cannery Row since 1956. The wooden building by bay waters still holds magic — as if the spirits of Ricketts, Steinbeck and bohemian pals whispered and laughed over the wine jars all night long.

Now, feeling their age, group members have approached the City of Monterey about taking over and preserving the beloved site. City Council last week gave City Manager Fred Meurer the go-ahead to begin discussions.

Speaking for the private owners, Carmel lawyer Bill Stewart told The Pine Cone this week: "We'll get together in the near future — within the next 30 days. I imagine the location's worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, but money's not the point. We are not selling. It will be a transfer for the place's protection. We (owners) are beginning to die off. And we don't want to see the Ricketts Lab become a restaurant or bar."

And: "We want to make certain that the building will never be messed with. One condition would be our continued use of it. And we'll set down certain rules. I imagine that, like Tor House (Foundation), there would be some sort of advisory board to make sure the building stays as it is. You can be sure that we'll keep an eye on it."

Members of the Lab-based social club include Stewart, Stock, Supervisor Sam Karas, retired Judge Richard Eldred, resort man Ed Haber, attorney Doc Etienne (Monterey Jazz Festival board president), developer Will Shaw, cartoonists Gus Arriola, Eldon Dedini, Hank Ketcham.

"I'll let you know what happens as we proceed," Stewart pledged.

Beyond flamboyance

Both Reggie Jackson and Mother Marie Aimee would be surprised over appearing side by side within the same sentence. Somehow, I don't think either would object.

Certainly one of our time's great and charismatic athletes, Jackson was elected by baseball writers to the Hall of Fame on his first try.

Bach Festival benefit features popular tenor Gordon

A BENEFIT for Carmel Bach Festival will be held at 5:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16, in the home of Mrs. Ansel Adams.

"Tenor David Gordon joins with Mrs. Adams," benefit spokespersons report, "to present an intimate song recital to benefit the Adams Fellows of the Virginia Best Adams Master Vocal Class at Carmel Bach Festival."

The audience is "strictly limited" and "a few tickets are still available" at $125 apiece. Call 624-1521.

The program — Dreams and Imaginations: Songs of Love, Romance and Fantasy — will feature works by Handel, Schubert, Faure, Warlock, Dougherty, Lalo and Chanler.

Timothy Bach from San Francisco Conservatory of Music will accompany. Patrons will meet the artists during a reception afterwards with hors d'oeuvres by Michael Jones and sparkling wine from Chalone.

Gordon will be singing the role of The Evangelist during the Carmel Bach Festival's 1993 season (July 17-Aug. 8). As master class teacher, he also will be holding free public instructional sessions at Carmel Presbyterian Church, and repeating his song recital at Monterey's Casa Serrano.

Piano pair

MOZART SOCIETY of California will present pianists William and Eva Kinderman in concert on Friday evening, Jan. 15.

Their appearance is scheduled to start at 8 p.m. in Monterey's Church of Religious Science (corner of Pacific and Franklin). They will render compositions of Mozart and Beethoven.

According to series spokespersons, a "limited number of single tickets" will be available at the door. Season membership cards were mailed out in September.

A critic wrote of Kinderman: "He manages to play the Diabello Variations with an understanding and expertise that would be the envy of any professional pianist."

And another: "Eva Solar-Kinderman plays with an unusually light but always intense and finely weighted, strategically controlled, superbly balanced and secure touch."

The concert will be followed by a reception to which all attendees are invited. Information: 625-3637.

Organ concert

MONTEREY PENINSULA Organ Buffs will meet at 4 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 17, at Big Joe's Barbeque near the airport.

Concertizing then and there on the Baldwin Organ will be Ann Tanner.

If you wish more information about the event or group, call 375-3867.

Santa Catalina

WESTWIND INTERNATIONAL Folk Ensemble will sing and dance at Santa Catalina School Performing Arts Center at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16.

Admission to the ensemble's program is free.

Formed in 1959, the San Francisco group includes a folk chorus, dance troupe and band. In the repertoire: English sword dances, Irish reels, Appalachian clogging, Southern shape-note hymns, Shaker worship dances and other forms.

Now in its 33rd season, Westwind performs throughout California and Nevada as well as on many folk festival tours in Europe.

Information: 655-9341.

Another no-cost concert will occur at the school's Performing Arts Center at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 29.

Appearing will be San Francisco's City Winds Woodwind Quintet — flutist Esther Landau, Laura Reynolds (oboe), James Freeman (clarinet) and horn player Alison McKee.

This unit has been selected to perform concerts in San Francisco public schools with the 1992-93 Symphony Adventures in Music.

DON'T FORGET that concert organist and recording artist Thomas Murray will be at Carmel's Church of the Wayfarer at 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 22.

On the faculty at Yale University, Murray will play the church's new 32-rank Schoenstein pipe organ. His program will feature Romantic period compositions and transcriptions of orchestral works by Bach, Liszt, Debussy.

Call 624-3550 for ticket reservations. Prices: $7 (annex) and $10 (sanctuary).

There's a closed circuit TV system whose six-foot screen will give all comers a clear view of the performer.

In the early 1920's Sicilians spent the fishing season in Monterey. Many of them became permanent residents, and have passed on some of their most flavorful recipes used for the Fresh Local Catch – either from the ocean or from one of the rivers. (Ask your waitperson for our daily selection.)

A PUBLIC reception for high-level lensmen Mark Citret and Joel Leivick will be held from 6:30-8:00 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15, at the Center for Photographic Art in Carmel's Sunset Complex.

They will be on hand for the gallery occasion, which marks the exhibit on view there through Feb. 21.

Also, Citret and Leivick will conduct a workshop from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16. Call 625-5181 for the cost and other details.

The show's title: Vast Endeavors. It consists of Citret's Construction Site Series plus Leivick's Carrara and Other Photographs of Italy.

"These two bodies of work incorporate pristine black-and-white images to express realities which address our effect on the landscape," says Center spokesperson Diane Hanek, "giving us a majestic sense of scale and dynamic view of human intervention."

Since springtime 1990, Citret has been photographing the massive Oceanside Water Pollution Control Plant under construction in San Francisco. The site's metamorphosis is seen by him as "a sort of archeological dig in reverse."

Leivick's "passion for complex visual fields was satisfied in 1987 when he was led to the quarries of the Apian Alps above Carrara," Hanek adds. "Over the past four years, he has captured striking photographs of a landscape marked by the human need for massive marble stonework."

•

Carmel-based photographers Lovell and Libby Langstroth will meet all comers at a reception scheduled for 6-8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 22, it was stated this week.

"This exhibit," museum program notes declared, "seeks to portray with color photographs the exquisite beauty of the organisms of the kelp forest and the communities in which they live. The images and accompanying text serve to illustrate the fascinating natural history of the creatures...."

The Langstroths moved to Carmel in 1980 after retiring from their professions in physical anthropology and medicine. They have pursued studies in marine biology and many of their images are on display at Monterey Bay Aquarium, where they work as volunteers.

PACIFIC GROVE Art Center's next reception for artists, members and friends will be held from 7-9 p.m. Friday, Jan. 15.

Then the new exhibits will continue through Feb. 9.

In the Gill Gallery, Dyke Gallery and Boyer Gallery will be two-dimensional works presented by Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation member artists.

And in the Photography Gallery will be work by Pacific Grove lenswoman Roxana Keland.

•

THE JANUARY show at Monterey Coffeehouse Bookshop (472 Alvarado) features photo images by C. Joseph Gough.

He got the shots on a visit to Eastern and Western Europe, both before and after the Berlin Wall fell.

Gough has the firm Crystal Photographic.

•

A SEVEN-FOOT steel sculpture by Carmel Valley artist Richard Mayer has been installed in the United Airlines departure lounge area of Monterey Peninsula Airport. Reasonably enough, it's named Flight.

THIS PAINTING by Y.S. Lim — White Swan — is part of the Monterey Peninsula Art Foundation show at Pacific Grove Art Center. (See Art Roundup.)

Completed in 1968, the piece is on long-term loan to the airport.

"It celebrates locomotive evolution from pre-history to the jet age," Mayer says. "My intent was to fuse biomorphic (animal) forms with machine shapes to produce an animate force poised for flight."

•

ZANTMAN GALLERIES of Carmel (Sixth and Mission) makes known a reception for painters Don Clausen (abstracts) and Phyllis Londraville (fantasy).

The three-hour public event will start at 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16. Then their work will be up at least through Jan. 26.

ORGANIZERS OF the 1993 Monterey County Studio Tour say artists interested in participating should attend either of two workshops scheduled for 7-9:30 p.m. Jan. 20-21 at Pacific Grove Art Center.

The word was: "These will offer information and hands-on experience in solving problems related to successful studio tour participation — self-promotion, cost effective framing, pricing art works, studio set-up, working before the public."

The tour is scheduled on May 15-16 by Artist Equity (Central Coast Chapter). Payment of $25 holds space until Feb. 1.

Wonder warms wintry weeks

Sure — why not? Reggie hit 563 home runs during a 21-year career (sixth biggest total) and batted in 1,702 scores.

Jackson had few equals as a clutch hitter. He was a self-aware actor too, swaggering, working the crowd, striking out or clubbing a four-bagger with mythic might. A former ladylove of mine, at her first major league game, called him "the sexiest man I've ever seen."

Be that as it may, the sense of wonder is sublimely versatile. It dwells with the cheering thousands, and with that which rests far beyond the roar. It thrives on monastery silence: where The Holy enters simple chores like wisps of cloud.

On the same day that Reggie nailed down his Hall of Fame vote, Mother Marie Aimee died at the Monastery of Carmelite Nuns near Point Lobos. She was 95 years old — the last surviving nun of the five who established the quiet place.

The original site was across a field from Tor House. Having made her first profession of vows in 1920, Mother Marie Aimee was prioress for 23 years.

Her priest nephew and several priest friends celebrated a funeral Mass at the monastery chapel on Jan. 7. She was buried in the crypt there.

Mother Marie Aimee. Some wondrous dramas are neither public nor loud. Perhaps it's the silence, seemingly meek, tougher than human hardness, that teaches one to think with the heart.

Gentle fellow

Surely the magic includes what people leave behind — legacy — when bodily life ceases. Bob Abinante left much. Cancer took him from his wife and family; Bob was 44.

Bob worked with older brother Gene at downtown Monterey's Abinante Music. The business was started by their late father in 1930.

There were many, many community links — Bob was the first chairman of Monterey Bay Center for the Arts. He occasionally wrote about the proposed project for this newspaper.

Bob held offices in Carmel Music Society, Music Teacher's Association, Sierra Club, Audubon Society, Old Monterey Council, Leadership Monterey Peninsula. He will be remembered for his gentle humor and constantly creative turns of thought.

But Bob could be tenacious too. I love fooling with jazz piano; a burned hand and math fear always have kept me from taking lessons — and, in my case, the ear goes only so far. Bob Abinante (a better than fair jazz keyboardist) would lay in wait.

I'd enter the shop and noodle at one of the electric pianos. Swift as Art Tatum solos, appearing out of nowhere, Bob would sit down on the bench beside me and force-feed chord patterns, harmonic setups, common sense.

This went on for years, two-minute lessons, one at a time. He wouldn't let me wallow in well-meaning ignorance.

Jazz Tides

By John Detro

Diz

GROWN MEN and women wept. So many of us loved John Birks (Dizzy) Gillespie that the weeping occurred openly and without shame when the gentle, generous giant died last week at age 75.

Many thousands of words have been written about Diz since pancreatic cancer took him away. Jazz historians already have noted his major influence as trumpet stylist, composer, bandleader, parent for the Cuban/Bop melding, worldwide spirit of reconciliation. What I can offer: personal recollections.

The first jazz column I ever wrote (1956) had Dizzy as its subject. His clowning, it said, never could overshadow Gillespie's creative contributions. "Some fine people have died for this music," he once told a questioner. "How more serious can anyone get?"

•

It was my amazed pleasure to hang out backstage with Dizzy during Monterey Jazz Festival — particularly the last three editions. When Diz looked physically tired of hosting fans by the scores, I once asked if he wanted anything. Fetching the coffee (cream, no sugar) primed a friendship.

In 1992, he collapsed from exhaustion and underwent surgery ("intestinal blockage"), but still showed up at the last hurrah of MJF founder Jimmy Lyons. Diz looked bone weary, thinner, distracted, wearing thick silence like a cape. Some tears started then as old pals took close looks and began their silent goodbyes.

In 1991, Diz joined Stan Getz for horseplay at the arena Sunday afternoon. Later, I stood with them while Stan told Diz that Getz planned to marry young singer Samantha in the near future.

Dizzy kidded Stan about the age difference; then both men shed tears because they had beloved women in their lives. ("I'd be lost without Lorraine," Diz said. They were married 52 years, and he died on her birth anniversary.)

In 1990, he conducted the High School All-Stars on Sunday afternoon and then stayed backstage until late that night. Hundreds lined up for autographs and happy patter. Tiring, he saw a young woman carrying an infant. "Give me that baby!" Dizzy shouted. Holding the little one in his arms, Diz beamed, zest for the occasion filling him again.

Hours after that, we chatted. He said he wouldn't change anything about his life. With jazz radio people and a few other writers hanging about, Diz involved me in a comedy routine. Did I take that joint from his briefcase? He was quick of wit, hipper than hip, but never cruel. The media folk were yawning and needed a laugh; Dizzy provided it.

Jazz photographer Will Wallace and I were at Kimball's East, covering a Diz opening for a national magazine. A real compliment ensued. In the dressing room, I asked Dizzy what he'd like to talk about. "You're the writer," he replied. "You got the words. Say whatever you like; it'll be all right."

•

Bottom line. So far, I've met three truly great human beings: Eleanor Roosevelt, the poet Kenneth Patchen, John Birks Gillespie. Someone in Bill Clinton's crowd should have suggested a declaration of national mourning. Protocol be damned — Diz deserved no less.

Well, there's one more story. Dizzy's publicist, Virginia Wicks, said her last conversation with him was through the long-distance phone lines.

Virginia overheard that his hospital room's radio had jazz flowing out. "So you're still listening," she kidded.

Diz responded: "The music never stops."

• Portofino Coffee House has booked Trio Jazz on Thursday, Jan. 14. Bassist Bryan McConnell, tenorman Les Rose, John Goldsmith at the drums.

On Friday night, Jan. 15 — "eclectic jazz stylings from Jack and Jenny." Information: 373-7379.

• Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz spotlights hot young trumpeter Roy Hargrove fronting his quintet on Monday night, Jan. 18. Starts at 8 p.m. and $14 advance (Ticketmaster) or $16 at the door.

Hargrove now has Ron Blake on tenor along with a brilliant pianist and drummer — Marc Cary and Greg Hutchinson respectively.

Concerts rather define musical excellence

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

THANKS TO the Carmel Music Society, Sunset Auditorium became our own special Carnegie Hall last Friday night.

Mezzo-soprano Frederica von Stade, one of the foremost vocal artists in the world today and certainly one of the best known thanks to her numerous TV appearances in concert and opera, sang the same program for a full house audience that she will repeat in that New York locale this week. Partnered magnificently by pianist Martin Katz, she sang a program that certainly broadened musical horizons for this listener. It was not what one would expect fron an artist whose principal field of endeaver is the operatic stage, yet it was a memorable experience.

Rare level

This was true musical sophistication on a level one seldom meets here. The artist drew fron an enormous repertoire — songs which are pretty much a musical secret kept from the general public.

She concentrated on Italian, German, French and South American music of the late l9th century and the first half of the 20th century. In a fascinating kaleidoscopic display of energy and concentration, Miss von Stade traversed the music of 31 art songs, some longer, some shorter, but each one a gem as she performed it.

Most of the composers represented are known mainly for major symphonic compositions rather than such vocal miniatures. Respighi, Puccini and Pizzetti were represented in the first group. The music was neo-romantic.

Warm delivery

As the warm animated delivery and proportioned, dynamic control of the singer's projection of intensity was revealed, one knew one was in the presence of a consummate musician.

Puccini's song El'uccellino and Pizzetti's I Pastore were ample demonstrations of the musical intelligence and thought applied to the process of performance. Six songs by Richard Strauss had more operatic overtones and it was a pleasure to hear the voice's lovely floating tone and warmth being applied here.

A lullaby sung tenderly was reflective and vocally wide ranging. In a mother's playful catalogue of her child's charms, Miss von Stade almost teased the audience as she invited them to enjoy the idea of the song.

The Wiegenlied was pure toned and created an atmosphere akin to Silent Night while Zueignungl was a soaring projection and the closest approach to an aria all evening.

Major change

In Schonberg's Cabaret Songs the artist's entire aspect changed, becoming flirtatious and projecting a risque character. The voice became free and broad and the personality had wit and charm. There was a smile and a twinkle and it was a delightful projection.

Songs by Messaien, Honegger, Satie and Poulenc made up the French grouping and each one was given its own special character and weight. To achieve this purity of purpose and distinction of meaning was by no means an easy task, and Miss von Stade was a flawless interpreter, maintaining continuity and pacing in excellent fashion.

Five Popular Argentinian Songs arranged by Ginastera were a well contrasted entity which again gave the singer an opportunity to display her vocal flexibility and interpretive splendor.

Throughout the evening, pianist Martin Katz was the sterling exponent of his music, matching and supporting his artist in superior style. His level of musical perception was splendid.

Two encores — Rodgers and Hart's Everybody Loves You When You're Asleep and Carol Hall's Jenny Rebecca — were performed.

By LYN BRONSON

FOR ITS third concert of the season, the Monterey County Symphony under the direction of Music Director Clark Suttle once again demonstrated its sterling abilities in its presentation of one of the major orchestral and choral works of the repertoire — Ein deutsches Requiem by Johannes Brahms.

Since this is a work heard more often in recording than in live performance, it was a pleasure to hear it at all. And to hear it so well performed added immeasurably to the experience.

Worth it

A lot of work necessarily goes into such a undertaking because of the logistical problems of coordinating the orchestra, chorus and soloists, and you would have needed a shoehorn to squeeze anyone else on stage. But, was it ever worth it!

As a musician, I am always aware of the varying degrees of involvement I experience while listening to music.

At its worst sometimes the music fails to engage my attention and I find myself starting to think about something else, and suddenly I notice with a start that the performance has ended and I have had amnesia.

At its best I feel mesmerized by the music and am led along by its every developing nuance. And, at its very, very best I feel goose bumps on the back of my neck, a delicious sensation all too rare in concert performances.

Well, this turned out to be a multi-goosebump occasion. While not all of the seven movements of Ein deutsches Requiem are equally effective, this is the fault of Brahm's writing and not of the Monterey County Symphony's performance.

Wave after wave

But the Den alles Fleisch ist wie Gras, Herr lehre doch mich and Denn wir haben hie keine bleibende Staff movements gave me wave after wave of delicious goosebumps.

One of the problem passages in the work is the fugal close of the third movement with its pedal point low D for tympani, double-bass, and contra bassoon, but Maestro Suttle managed to make this passage clear and extremely effective. Another very effective section was in the sixth movement with the text "When the trumpet will sound" where the orchestra and chorus burst forth with vibrant energy.

The two soloists, soprano Andrea Matthews and bass-baritone John Ostendorf, sang well in their small but important roles and John Ostendorf even amplified the chorus when he was not singing solo.

Excellence evident

Ken Ahrens' excellent work in rehearsing the chorus was evident in its performance, and the chorus sang with clear enough diction for me to hear easily in the very back row of Sunset Center.

A special mention should be made of Dr. Louise Cuyler's fine translation of the text which was included with the printed program. This added immeasurably to one's comprehension during the performance.

In choral works it is difficult enough to understand English when it is sung, and therefore ever so much more difficult to comprehend non-English text.

The afternoon's concert began with a performance of Mozart's Symphony No. 40 in G Minor. This symphony never fails to make its effect, and on this occasion it received a stylish and powerful performance with just a tinge of bittersweet that seemed wholly appropriate.

At first I felt that the Andante movement was a trifle fast, but after a few minutes I was totally convinced that it was an excellent tempo.

The Monterey County Symphony has produced some spectacular events during the past few years — Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, Holst's The Planets and now Ein deutsches Requiem.

More of the magic

ELSEWHERE IN today's edition, an article considers The Magic — individuals and events which flow from and/or inspire a sense of wonder. And now we encounter another such human being.

Poet and educator Ismana Katz keeps graceful humor, writing time and apparent peace of heart while working hard on the job and living a rich family life with her husband Joseph and their two youngsters.

The newsbreak: Ismana will teach a course on Women and Religion during Monterey Peninsula College's spring semester. Sessions will happen from 6-9 p.m. beginning Feb. 2.

Additionally, she'll teach a course — History of World Religions — from 7-10 p.m. Wednesdays. (Katz has a Master's degree in comparative history, with a special emphasis on world religions, from UC/Santa Cruz.)

Early registration is advised. This can occur throughout Welcome Days — Jan. 19-20. In-person registration for the semester gets three days (Jan. 22-25-26). For more details, call MPC at 646-4000.

About the first-mentioned course she says: "It's an introduction to women's roles in traditional religious societies and open to women and men of all ages who're interested in exploring the world of religious symbology, mystical experience and religious history as it pertains specifically to women's experience."

And: "We'll undertake an intellectual exploration grounded in experiential learning, group dialogue and meetings with spiritual teachers and religious leaders in the community. Art, music and film will be used, and readings from primary texts dealing with women's religious life."

And: "The great world religions have created a paradox which forms the matrix of women's religious experience and expression. They have oppressed women socially while liberating many of them mystically. Our (course) goal will be to come to grips with this great paradox objectively, critically and — perhaps most importantly — creatively."

The other course? A survey of the historical, social and cultural developments of world religions, including "archaic or tribal religion. Emphasis will be on the founding prophets and the original sacred communities which formed around them. The mystical tradition within each religion will be studied as a vehicle for social reform and accelerated intellectual and artistic activity."

•

MONTEREY COFFEEHOUSE Bookshop (right downtown at 472 Alvarado) offers programs in its Living Well Series next week.

• Monday, Jan. 18, at 8 p.m. Fitness professional Pamela Dekker will address her discipline, referred to in the announcement as "today's fountain of youth."

• Wednesday, Jan. 20, at 8 p.m. Personal trainer Marcy Curry will consider Fitness: Fables, Myths and Rumors.

On Jan. 26, the shop begins a weekly Book Study "where single people will have a chance to meet other singles while discussing topics that are especially pertinent to their lives."

Learn from your Realtor

Good real estate agents can give you up-to-the-minute information about the homes for sale in our area. Their expertise, however, goes far beyond the basics of the local housing market, financing, and the other specialized skills needed to get you settled and into your new home.

If you're moving into a new area, a Realtor can be a valuable source of information about a wide range of subjects that will help you settle into the community quickly and easily. Where are the nearest bus stops? What about recreational facilities, like community centers, swimming pools or tennis courts? Which markets have the freshest produce or the best buys on cat food?

Don't be afraid to ask for recommendations if you'll need a new hairdresser, veterinary hospital or babysitters. Good agents know the communities where they work inside and out, and they're glad to share their knowledge.
